Budget cuts blamed:

West Sac fire response times slowed in 2011

By Steve Marschke
News-Ledger Editor

Firefighter response times got slower in 2011 – apparently a product of fire department budget cuts.

The West Sacramento Fire Department reports its average response time for emergencies went from four minutes and 20 seconds in 2009 to four minutes and 13 seconds in 2010, followed by a 30-second increase in 2011 to four minutes, 43 seconds.

Local firefighters were not busier with emergencies in 2011 – they had fewer calls for fires, emergency medical services and other emergencies in 2011 than in 2010.

The department was, however, smaller in 2011.

"It boils down to what is an acceptable risk for the community," Fire Chief Al Terrell told the News-Ledger. "Basically, due to the state of the economy, we've had to deploy a flexible employment staffing model. When we don't have everyone at work, we've had to take an engine out of service. We've always had five engines and a truck in service, and now (some of the time) we have four engines and a truck."

Terrell said that this happens when enough personnel aren't available – due to vacations, extended training, or other reasons. Normally, Fire Station 45 on Lake Washington Boulevard in Southport has two fire companies. But when that's not possible, it drops to one company – and the department finds itself spread thinner.

"About 80 percent of the time or more, we're fully staffed," said Terrell.

How dangerous is it to have response times slow to four minutes, 43 seconds?

"At this stage, I'm not really concerned – when it gets into the five-minute range, I'd be more concerned," said Terrell. He explained a bit about why that is, and how a city decides to deploy fire stations:

"Medically speaking, if the brain goes without oxygen for six minutes, your brain is dead, even if your body is still alive," said Terrell. "So in the fire industry, fire stations are strategically located to be able to arrive anywhere in their district in six minutes or under. We've strategically located our fire stations so we should arrive anywhere in our area within six minutes. Getting there in less than five minutes is doing really well."

West Sacramento now has five stations, including the Lake Washington Boulevard station that usually holds two companies.

Has anyone died or been seriously injured because of the slower response time average?

"To my knowledge, that hasn't happened," said the chief. "If I had my way, I'd prefer to always have five engines and a truck – 30 seconds can make a difference."

Terrell said that when he arrived to take over the department about four years ago, it had 71 personnel. Now, it has 66, a decrease that includes four uniformed firefighters.

"There are less people to fill in the gaps, so we have to flexibly staff," said Terrell.

The cuts to the fire department are part of city-wide budget cuts approved by the city council in response to the recession and city budget troubles. Police and fire services were among the last departments to feel the weight of the city's cuts.

The West Sacramento Fire Department reports it responded to 253 fires in 2011, down from 281 in 2009. It also responded to 4,905 emergency medical calls and 128 hazardous materials calls in 2011, in addition to 367 false alarms. In general, the department responded to more emergencies in 2010 than in either 2009 or 2011.

Reynolds is 'Woman of the Year'

A woman who has involved herself in West Sacramento's community has earned "Woman of the Year" distinction in Mariko Yamada's 8th Assembly District.

Debbie Reynolds, 35, joined other state-wide honorees in receiving the award in a ceremony at the capitol on March 26.

"I was a little bit nervous," she told the News-Ledger. "I'm more of a behind-the-scenes person."

Reynolds is the administrator of Eskaton Wilson Manor, an affordable housing facility for seniors in West Sacramento. She's been the administrator for two years and has worked there for eight.

Last year, she took on the task of creating the city's first Veterans Day parade – a festivity that successfully wound its way through the Park Boulevard neighborhood in November, for the first. She also was at the forefront of a successful effort to raise money to help local veteran Minoru Ohye visit his long-separated brother in Japan. Ohye got his wish, and saw his brother for the first time in 60 years.

Reynolds, a mom from North Highlands with two kids, is also active in West Sacramento's Mighty Rotary Club chapter.

In person, she brims with energy.

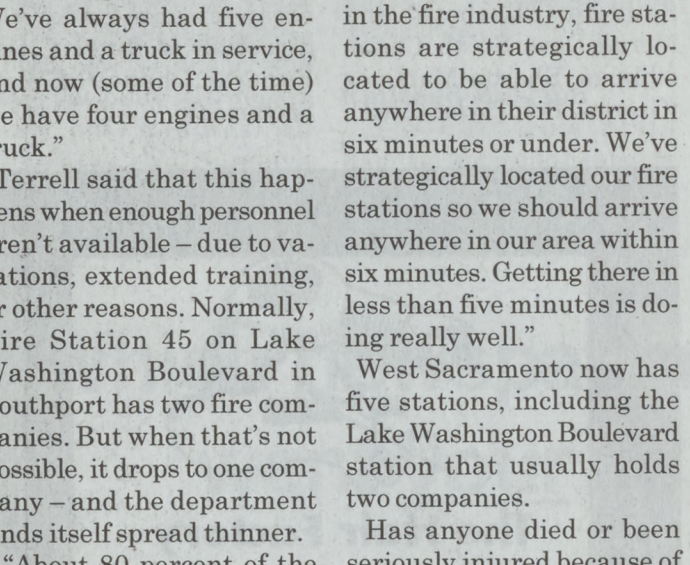
In a press release, Yamada called her "an exceptional leader in Yolo County."

"The veterans in West Sacramento were also given a reason to celebrate in the first-ever (veterans) parade in the city, thanks to Debbie's hard work."

'State of the City' tonight

The annual 'State of the City' address and dinner is tonight at city hall.

Keynote speaker is Mayor Christopher Cabaldon, who promises a recognition of West Sacramento's 25th anniversary, with members of the city's incorporation committee.



A missing Elk Grove man was found on West Sacramento's riverfront March 26, and carried up the riverbank to get medical help. The unidentified man was about 75 years old and had been missing for two days. Further details about the man were unavailable.

The man was found on a levee near South River Road, and a unit from the Elk Grove police also responded. West Sacramento firefighters performed a "low angle rescue," carrying the man up the riverbank using a rope system and a litter.

"He had an altered level of consciousness and possible hypothermia," Fire Department Division Chief Jon Heilman told the News-Ledger.

Planners choose cell tower design

By Steve Marschke
News-Ledger Editor

A water tower it is.

West Sacramento's planning commission on Thursday voted unanimously in favor of making a new Southport cell phone tower look like a water tower – an allusion to the region's agricultural heritage.

Nixed were proposed designs in the form of a tree or a windmill.

The 80-foot tower is planned for 3200 Jefferson Blvd., near Tower Mart and Linden Road, with both homes and businesses as its neighbors. The Vista Towers facility expects to serve Verizon, AT&T, MetroPCS and Clearview wireless internet.

"I would expect the tower could be up this summer, probably in the July-August time frame," West Sacramento senior planner David Tilley told the News-Ledger. "The carriers could be operating maybe 30 to 45 days after the water tower is built."

Some design details remain:

Computer rendering: proposed cell phone 'water tower' is at left, near Tower Mart and Wicked West BBQ & Pizza (from a City of West Sacramento staff report)

"The only other aspect we have to work out is what kind of mural or treatment will be put on the tower itself," said Tilley. "Something artistic. The community was very favorable to something of an agrarian nature, hopefully something made to look old rather than new."

The antennas will be hidden inside the structure.

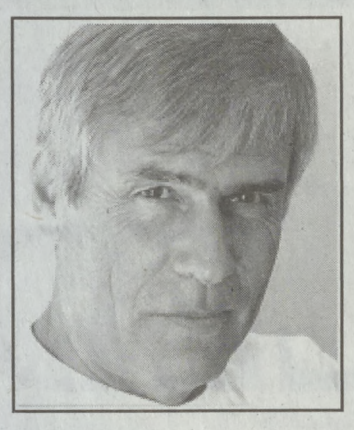
Tilley said it took five hearings and a community meeting to get to Thursday's approval.

Meanwhile, a planned AT&T cell phone tower to serve the Bridgeway Lakes and Bridgeway Island area near Marshall Road and Southport Parkway is showing "no movement," said Tilley.

But he expects that this second tower – planned in the shape of a eucalyptus tree – will still be needed by AT&T, since the Jefferson Boulevard tower won't be close enough for full coverage.

There's nothing else like pee-wee baseball

My Back Pages



By Daryl Fisher

Note: For the past few weeks I've been going over to the Little League park to watch two of my grandsons play pee-wee baseball and to try and be of some help to my son-in-law, who is managing his first pee-wee team, and it has reminded me of the following column, which was penned almost 20 years ago:

The coming of spring in the Sacramento Valley means different things to different people. To the sun worshiper, it means that endless months of depressing rain and white skin are almost over; to allergy-sufferers, it means it's time to start sneezing and blowing your nose again; to the lover of gardening, it's time to prepare the soil for all that glorious plant growth that is just around the corner; and to the local parent of young boys, it's time to try and find a way out of being their Little League baseball manager or coach.

This year, however, my youngest son, Kyle, has talked me into signing up to manage his pee-wee baseball team (the Reds) in the West Sacramento Little League. His argument was simple and effective. Since I had managed his older brother's pee-wee teams, I owed him.

"If you're the manager, Dad," he said with deep conviction, "I'll get to be the pitcher!"

"But it doesn't exactly work that way, Kyle," I tried to explain. "Plus in pee-wees, there is no pitcher. Everyone hits off of a tee."

"Right," said my son, obviously starting to question just what kind of manager I was going to be if I didn't even know that you need a pitcher to play baseball.

"Kyle," I said, "to tell you the truth, I'm a little burned out on Little League baseball coaching. Maybe you could wait another year? You're only six, you know."

"But Dad," he said with his most pathetic voice, "that's what you said last year." Then he looked up at me with those big brown eyes of his and his facial expression left no doubt that he was thinking those awful words which all parents fear; you love my brothers (or sisters) more than me!

So, once again, it was time to break out the fluff balls and undersized mitts and prepare my ears for that awful aluminum "clink" of the bat. But by the time I had called all twelve of the Reds and told them about their first practice, I was beginning to feel some of the old fun and excitement which pee-wee baseball brings out in almost everyone who participates. And with all the phone calls completed, I sat back for a few minutes and tried to remember some of the things required of a successful pee-wee manager.

First, you have to be really good at tying double-knots. Pee-wees are, for the most part, six and seven year olds, and almost all of them will show up for every practice (and the majority of their games) with at least one shoe untied.

Second, you have to be great at finding things. Pee-wees lose their hats, their bats, their gloves, their snack-bar money, and even their parents from time to time.

Third, you have to be able to anticipate potty breaks. This can usually be done by noticing how the players on my team are standing. If they are squirming, holding their legs tightly together, and making funny faces, you need to get them over to the bathroom ASAP!

Fourth, you have to be accomplished at being able to talk some sweet, unsuspecting soul into being the team mother. She is the person who has to, among many other things, organize the team float for the Opening Day parade, get other busy mothers to work in the snack bar, and collect all the money from the candy sale. This person always ends up being a saint in my eyes.

Fifth, you have to be able to quickly establish a set of often-repeated rules, the most important being that only one pee-wee at a time (the hitter) can have a bat in his or her hands. There is simply nothing quite as frightening as watching five or six eager young pee-wees with baseball bats in their hands warming up for batting practice in the same area at the same time.

Sixth, you have to be able to cheerfully accept the fact that the attention span for a perfectly normal pee-wee is approximately 30 seconds, and on warm, sunny afternoons with interesting-looking puffy white clouds floating above them, even that number drops dramatically.

Seventh, you have to have energetic adult base coaches with loud and distinctive voices. Pee-wees love to get on base and race around the diamond, but they're not always sure just when to take off or what direction to go. A good base coach can get them pretty skilled at running to first base instead of third when they hit the ball. But only a great one can organize things from that point on.

Only one pee-wee at a time (the hitter) can have a bat in his or her hands. There is simply nothing quite as frightening as watching five or six eager young pee-wees with baseball bats in their hands warming up for batting practice in the same area at the same time.

Two wins for RCHS tennis

FROM RCHS

"Spring Break is a break from school, not from tennis," River City High School tennis coach Dave Brooks often says. So last week, while many were away on vacation, the Raiders narrowly defeated Lincoln 5 to 4, blew out Marysville 9 to 0, and came in first place at the Quincy Invitational Tournament.

Against Lincoln, Sarah Yang won 10-2 at #2 girls singles and Michael Lee squeaked past his opponent 10-9 (5) at #2 boys singles. RC dropped the two boys doubles matches, but swept the three girls and mixed doubles contests. Cindy Oseguera and Lily He won 10-4 at #1 girls doubles, Mariana Contreras and Avneet Singh clinched the overall match with their 10-1 win at #2 girls doubles, and Lina Vang and Muradan Chhay held on for a 10-6 victory in mixed.

In the Marysville match, the Raiders rolled to easy wins throughout the lineup. Terry Vang shut out his opponent at #1 boys singles 10-0, Jai London lost just one game at #1 girls singles, Oseguera won 10-3 at #2

The cost is $15 for adults and $10 for children. For more information on how to purchase online tickets go to www.historicoldsac.org.

In the spirit of 'Obscura Day' -- an international celebration of unusual places and hidden wonders -- a special 'adults only' tour of underground Old Sac is planned after dark on Saturday, April 28. Guide "Miss Odessa" will take guests on a 90-minute evening walk to explore some of the "dark and racy" tales of the underground. Early reservations recommended.

Gone were items such as a commercial stove and oven, gear reducing transmission, banquet tables and chairs, and dishes, worth about $11,500. The owner of the goods reported having a friend look in on the warehouse from time to time. Yesterday, the friend visited and found numerous subjects taking things out of the warehouse. The "subjects told the friend they had (the owner's) permission." The owner learned of this incident the day after it happened.

The 34-year old transient was arrested.

(The institution has experienced a number of break-ins and thefts during recent months.)

April 6, 2:34 p.m.

An officer contacted a female transient with an open container of malt liquor on the 1600-block of West Capitol Avenue. The woman poured out the liquor. She appeared to be very drunk, and had urinated on herself. She was arrested for being too intoxicated to care for herself.

April 6, 12:55 p.m.

Letters to the Editor

Support Judge Maguire

Yolo Superior Court Judge Dan Maguire is being challenged in the election this June. He should be retained.

I have known Dan Maguire for many years both as a lawyer and now as a judge. I have known his opponent for many years too. Maguire has practiced law in both large and small firms. He was active in the Yolo County Bar Association for many years, serving as president for more than one term.

Although Dan Maguire has been a judge for less than two years, he has developed a reputation for fairness. He is well-prepared and hard working. He is thoughtful and analytical. His judicial temperment is exceptional. His broader legal experience and life experience make him not only the superior candidate but the type of person we want as a judge.

I have been on the bench for over five years. I practiced law in Yolo County for 24 years. I was a trial lawyer. In 2006, I was hired by the Yolo Superior Court Judges as a Court Referee. As a Referee, I heard many types of cases including family law, criminal, juvenile, traffic and small claims. In 2009, the governor appointed me as a judge. I believe I have good insight into what it takes to be a good judge. Dan Maguire has what it takes.

Vote to retain Judge Dan Maguire.

NEW FOR 2012:

Submit crime tips or get targeted alerts with new police social media tools

Sergeant Nathan Steele of the West Sacramento Police Department announced last month that the department is making new ventures into "social media" and communications.

Using the "Nixie" system, citizens can sign up to receive information from police as a text message on their cell phone or by email. Citizens can also find notifications from W.S.P.D. at www.nixie.com.

"Messages may include traffic alerts, at-risk missing persons, road hazards, as well as other relevant safety and community event information," said Steele in a press release.

The messages can target people within a quarter-mile radius of a targeted area, "giving them the opportunity to receive trustworthy information relevant only to their neighborhood," he added. "Residents decide from which local agencies they want to receive information.

Get information and register at www.nixie.com.

The department has also launched a new "app" for Android or iPhone smartphones.

The MYPD app, produced by Wired Blue, allows you to access all of the local police department's social media platforms, submit crime tips including photos or GPS location, access the W.S.P.D. phone directory, provide feedback to the department, participate in surveys, and go to the W.S.P.D. web page for information such as crime statistics.

You can get download the MYPD App by Wired Blue free from the Android Marketplace or iPhone App Store.

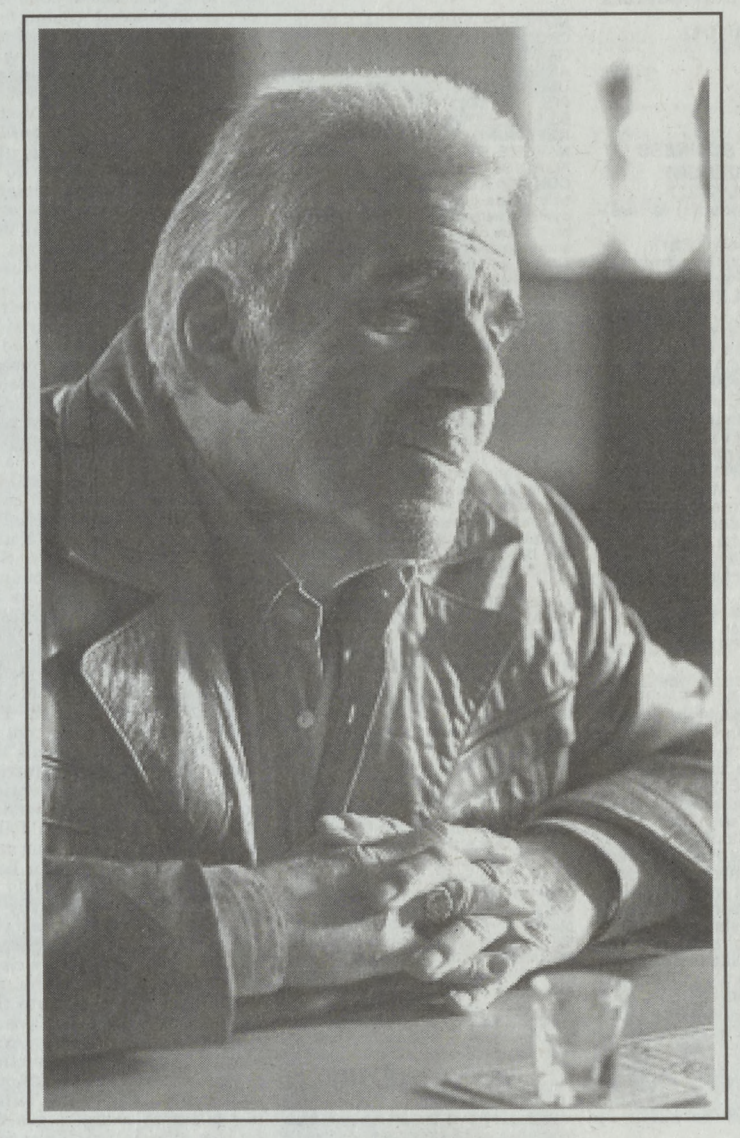
PICKS OF THE WEEK

"Mission: Impossible Ghost Protocol" (PG-13) -- Tom Cruise returns to his loud and lucrative franchise for a fourth installment, and it has all the intensity of a ticking time-bomb strapped under a speeding convertible careening off an exploding skyscraper full of double agents. Ethan Hunt (Cruise) and his team are blamed for a mission gone wrong and have to go rogue to clear their names and stop the outbreak of another world war.

Brad Bird ("The Incredibles," "Ratatouille") makes his directing-real-people debut and delivers the requisite super-cool look, fast pace and gripping action. This time around more lines and screen time are given to the supporting cast (Jeremy Renner, Paula Patton and Simon Pegg), who hold up their end of the deal. The spy genre has grown weak in the post-Bourne era, but M:IGP delivers a laser-guided, rocket-propelled shot of adrenaline.



DENNIS FARINA in 'The Last Rites of Joe May'

"The Last Rites of Joe May" -- In the West End of Chicago, Joe May (Dennis Farina), an over-the-hill hustler, steps out of the hospital to find that everyone thought he was dead. His apartment has been rented to Jenny (Jamie Anne Allman), a single mother with a young daughter, Angelina (Meredith Droeger). While he may be dead to everyone else in his small world, Joe is offered the chance to share the apartment with Jenny. A non-romantic bond forms, and these two new people become the most important relationships in Joe's life.

It's up-close character drama that has the right mix of bleakness and warmth. I recognize Farina from countless supporting roles, but here he's the centerpiece as a guy who realizes he's in the last chapters of his life with nothing to show for it but some pride.

"Shame" -- Brandon (Michael Fassbender) is a wealthy bachelor in New York. He is also a sex addict -- and not in a goofy "Two and a Half Men" kind of way. Despite the parade of women that march straight through his apartment, he is locked up, desperate and alone. When his sister (Carey Mulligan) asks to stay with him for a while, Brandon's walled-off existence comes to light as his life begins to spiral. It's racy and full of explicit things. It is not a happy sort of movie, but strong performances and an original script make it worth checking out for cinephiles.

"Garbo: The Spy" -- This unique and imaginative documentary delves into the story of a Spanish spy who made the D-Day invasion possible, and thus helped win World War II for the Allies. Code-named Garbo by the Brits, this lone man tricked the Germans into believing that the Normandy invasion was a decoy. He was so good that the Nazis believed him throughout the war, winning him medals from both Axis and Allies. It's a mind-blowing story told with style.

"The Dressmaker" by Kate Alcott (Doubleday, $25.95) Reviewed by Ealish Waddell

It seems like luck when spirited seamstress Tess glimpses celebrity couturier Lady Duff Gordon on the city docks waiting to board the famous Titanic. But it seems like destiny when she overhears that the designer is in need of a new maid for the journey, and within minutes Tess has finagled her way into the position. She quickly finds that her imperious and mercurial new boss isn't easy to work for, but Tess is determined: She dreams of becoming a fashion designer herself, and this job promises to be her foot in the door to the world of the rich and chic.

Then comes the shipwreck and a night of terror and grief. Separated from her patron during the chaos, Tess is relieved to find that Lady Duff Gordon has survived. But there seems to be some confusion about what exactly went on in the Gordon lifeboat, and some dark rumors begin circulating about the conduct of many of the passengers and crew in the midst of the crisis.

As soon as the rescue boat docks in New York City, an inquiry begins. New characters are introduced to exposit and advance the plot, including an intrepid reporter and a dogged politician, but solid, fair-minded Tess remains the clear lens through which we view the revelations of class prejudice, corporate bureaucracy and ignoble fear that can invade even the most basic moments of life and death.

While most stories about the Titanic tend to focus, quite naturally, on the high drama of the sinking, this plot deals more heavily with its aftermath -- particularly the psychological and social reactions of and to the survivors, and the contradictions and obfuscations of the investigation into what really happened on that April night. Although the characters at times seem to display a rather modern sensibility, it fits into the overall progressive tone and helps underscore the underlying themes of responsibility, morality and courage.

Dinner for Lunch

Most people use the majority of their energy between breakfast and dinner, so lunch is necessary to be productive and energetic. Dramatic calorie highs and lows aren't good for anyone, especially those with diabetes and diet-related illnesses. Researchers at the University of Georgia studied the eating patterns of athletes. Their study determined that men and woman showed higher levels of body fat if they had irregular eating patterns throughout the day, even if they were in energy balance by the end of the day.

In addition, compared with athletes who ate consistently through the day (breakfast, lunch, snacks and dinner), irregular eaters had worse muscle mass, lower energy levels and poor mental focus. These studies prove that when it comes to lunch, you are what you eat.

Good sources of protein, whole grains, vegetables and fruits will help you be more focused, productive and energetic throughout the rest of the day. The beauty of this recipe for Microwave Salmon with Mushroom, Apple and Endive Salad is that it can be quickly prepared for dinner as a warm dish and easily packed for lunch and eaten cold.

MICROWAVE SALMON WITH ENDIVE SALAD

Olive oil infused with sage and thyme perfectly accents the moist salmon steaks and the sharpness of the endive.

4 salmon steaks (8 ounces each), each 1-inch thick
4 1/2 tablespoons extra-virgin olive oil
3 tablespoons thinly sliced green onions, white ends and green tops, roots discarded
1 1/2 tablespoons apple cider vinegar
1/2 tablespoon honey
2 cloves garlic, minced
2 tablespoons minced fresh thyme leaves or 1 tablespoon dry thyme leaves
2 tablespoons minced fresh sage leaves or 1 tablespoon ground sage
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon freshly ground black pepper
6 ounces crimini or button mushrooms, thinly sliced
6 cups bite-size pieces curly endive (also known as chicory), washed
1 large Gala or Fuji apple, cored, seeded and thinly sliced
2 tablespoons freshly squeezed lemon juice

1. Rinse fish and pat dry. In a bowl, mix together 3 tablespoons of the oil, onions, vinegar, honey, garlic, thyme, sage and 1/2 teaspoon salt and 1/2 teaspoon pepper. Use 2 tablespoons of the seasoned oil to coat both sides of the salmon. Set the reminder of oil aside. Arrange salmon in a 7- by 11-inch microwave-safe baking dish, positioning thickest parts toward outside of dish.

2. Cover and microwave on HIGH (100 percent) for 4 to 5 minutes, giving each fish steak a half-turn after 2 minutes. Let stand, covered, for 4 minutes. Fish should be just slightly translucent or wet inside; cut in thickest part to test. Cover and set aside.

3. Place mushrooms, remaining 1/2 teaspoon of salt and pepper, and remaining 1 1/2 tablespoons oil in a 3-quart microwave-safe casserole. Cover; microwave on HIGH (100 percent) for 4 minutes, stirring after 2 minutes.

4. Add any remaining seasoned oil mixture to the cooked mushrooms to make a dressing. Stir in the endive, mixing lightly to coat greens evenly. Spoon endive and mushroom mixture onto 4 individual plates. Top each with the apple slices sprinkled with lemon juice, and a serving of salmon steak. Serves 4.
